

Audience Quotes from the Illumination Project

“The play impacts the campus by breaking down social barriers, while adding different perspectives to campus involvement.”

“The Illumination Project impacts the PCC campus. Since seeing it last year I have found myself speaking up more when I hear people making racial or homophobic comments.”

“I liked that the performance makes the situation raw, in your face – with the opportunity to evaluate.”

The Illumination Project is opening doors for dialogue at PCC.”

“I like that the performance gives us practice on how to build a healthy, supportive community.”

“Learning about these situations, and preventative education is necessary – we are too silent about these issues.”

“I learned that these situations are sexual harassment. I wouldn’t have known if I didn’t see the performance. I thought it was just normal.”

“The actors were incredible. I loved how their responses were well thought out and just made the performance real and more valuable.”

“The comfort level of the performance was great. I felt like I could join in at any time.”

“The play helps educate people about everyday situations where racism takes place, to help you better recognize those situations and do something about it.”

“I learned that everybody has their own religion and no matter what, accepting them, their religion, and gaining a friendship from someone with different religious views is acceptable.”

“The Illumination Project brings to light other religions and ways of thinking. It helps people get into the minds of others and understanding other points of view.”

“These plays expose reality. They inform students that racism still exists within our communities. Spreading this type of knowledge allows for a more inclusive environment.”

“I learned that no matter who you are when you hear a racial comment, you can do something, you can make a difference.”

“To know that others are there to support you is a great feeling. I liked everything about the performance; it’s a way of learning how to deal with the different issues of race.”

“The Illumination Project and the plays help us to challenge our own comfort zones, to see ‘what we’re capable of’ in a situation that bothers us. This gets people thinking!”