TEACHING ENGLISH AT PCC:
JOYS AND CONCERNS

- Jane R. Zunkel
- PCC Cascade English Department
- jzunkel@pcc.edu

- PCC Board Meeting – April 17, 2014
TEACHING ENGLISH AT PCC: JOYS AND CONCERNS

- Week 3
- Tawara Machi, Japanese poet

- All memorized,
- at last, the children’s names,
- Now their papers
- begin to manifest
- some personality.
Writing 115 – Introduction to Expository Writing
Joy – seeing students develop their academic voices and identities
Concern – How can we maintain a focus on access while responding to the completion agenda?
TEACHING ENGLISH AT PCC: JOYS AND CONCERNS

• Pictures removed for online version

• Writing 115 – Introduction to Expository Writing
• Joy – seeing students develop their academic voices and identities
• Concern – How can we maintain a focus on access while responding to the completion agenda?
TEACHING ENGLISH AT PCC: JOYS AND CONCERNS
TEACHING ENGLISH AT PCC: JOYS AND CONCERNS

- Writing 121 – English Composition
- https://my.pcc.edu/cp/home/displaylogin
- Joy – working with a broader range of students
- Concern – How do we offer the same quality of education to online students?
TEACHING ENGLISH AT PCC: JOYS AND CONCERNS

- Picture removed for online version

- English 106 – Introduction to Poetry
- Joy – discovering poetry with students and seeing their interpretive skills develop
- Concern – How can we maintain a solid, diverse program in the humanities and social sciences?
TEACHING ENGLISH AT PCC: JOYS AND CONCERNS

• Humanities: the Heart of the Matter (report and video)

http://vimeo.com/amacad