Dr. Chairsell reported in this year’s event the PCC Zen Dragons won third place in division four. She added that this team of first year rowers was led by Student Captain Kelaiah Holveck. Mr. Kesterson accepted the trophy on behalf of the team.

OCCA’s Discussions Regarding the WICHE and NCHEMS Report

Andrea Henderson, Executive Director, OCCA

Dr. Pulliams said Ms. Henderson would present information about the Oregon Community College Association’s (OCCA) lobbying plans and the Higher Education work group’s deliberation on community college governance and the Oregon Education System.

Ms. Henderson reported there are several major issues Oregon community colleges currently face including budget cuts, future state funding, significant enrollment increases, Oregon unemployment, capital construction, and community college governance proposals to name a few. She said there are some glimmers of good news including the Oregon business community’s increased interest and lobbying on behalf of community colleges.

Ms. Henderson said an issue of great concern is proposed changes in the governance structure of community colleges that could greatly reduce local government control currently in place for Oregon’s 17 community colleges. One proposal from the legislative work group on higher education would create a higher education coordinating board at the state level that would be responsible for financial aid as well as coordination between Oregon University System (OUS), Oregon Health and Science University (OHSU), and community colleges with the Oregon Board of Education, the Commissioner’s office, and local boards following. She said this would be a significant change from the current system with community colleges under one coordinating board with K-12.

Director Harper asked who would appoint the coordinating board. Ms. Henderson replied the coordinating board would be appointed by the governor and confirmed by the Senate. She added this proposal would mean there would be two coordinating boards above community colleges; the Community College Coordinating Board and the Higher Education Coordinating Board above that. She added that this structure could undermine the current local governance system in place in Oregon. She advised that Oregon community colleges will need to carefully craft a response to this proposal if local governance is to be maintained. Ms. Henderson added that the local governance is a large part of its ability to respond to their community’s needs.

Director Palm asked what is not working that has caused this perceived need for governance to come to the forefront now. Ms. Henderson responded that this proposal comes from a group that included Dennis Jones, David Loganecker from WICHE and Aims McGuinness from NCHEMS and two concerns they had. They believe community colleges under a coordinating board with K-12 rather than universities are less effective and that a more formal structure is needed for Oregon community colleges to be able to continue their positive achievements because they believe achievements are coming from individuals doing a good job rather than an effective system. Ms. Henderson said the OCCA board comprised of members from each Oregon community college will review the issue and create a position to preserve and protect what Oregon community colleges care most about.

Director Williams said he, like Director Palm, questioned the value of the additional layer of bureaucracy the proposal would bring and asked who selected Mr. Loganecker, Mr. Jones, and Mr. McGuinness to develop the proposal. Ms. Henderson replied that the members of the legislative work group selected these people because they are recognized national experts on post-secondary governance. She added that because of extreme state budget shortfall there is not going to be enough money in the next legislative session to do what has been done in past sessions and when that happens there is more emphasis on finding ways to do things differently.

Ms. Henderson said over the next few months the OCCA Board will look carefully at this issue and is asking local boards to also review what is being presented and to talk to legislators and explain why this plan is not a good idea. She cautioned that care must be taken on selection of which positions need to be opposed. Dr. Pulliams added that three areas important to remain under local governance include adoption and control of budgets, determination of tuition and fees, and hiring.

Chair Squire asked how much money would be saved if the proposed option were to be adopted. Ms. Henderson said this proposal is too early a stage of development for that to have been determined. She added that it will be important in the process to bring as much detail as possible regarding the financial impact of the proposal to Oregon community colleges. She added that the new Higher Education Coordinating Board would have the power to propose the budget to the Governor and to the Legislature for all post-secondary education and if in looking at the higher education budget in its entirety community colleges were determined to be the more cost effective for the first two years of a college degree that could become a reason to look at the budgets separately.

Director Williams posed the question of financial needs of rural vs. urban community colleges and the possible impact this proposal would have on PCC’s budget. Ms. Henderson said it is an important question because as it is currently envisioned the new coordinating board would not only be responsible for crafting the budget request but also for distribution of funds to community colleges, OHSU and OUS. She added that part of the legislative committee’s recommendation was the funding distribution model be changed from fte based to performance or completion funding model. Ms. Henderson added that as Oregon Community College advocates they will advocate in whatever basis the 17 community college boards decide best protects their interests.

Director Frisbee asked what steps the OCCA Board is going to take to move the dialogue along, how the PCC Board can participate, how information will be provided and what the decision will points be. Ms. Henderson responded that with the short timeframe for preparation work has to move quickly. She added that in an OCCA executive committee workshop earlier in the week a plan was laid out that includes appointment of a governance committee that includes OCCA board member, one or two current state board members, and college presidents who will take a deeper look at the issue and has greater knowledge. She added that she is in the process of gathering information from the past three governance studies that have been done in recent years and hopes to have that ready in less than a week. She said the October 8 OCCA board meeting will be primarily dedicated to discussion on governance and crafting of a comprehensive policy statement and direction for advocating the community college position on governance. Ms. Henderson said this will go to local boards in early November to allow each local board time for discussion before the December OCCA board meeting where the plan would be adopted in preparation for the upcoming legislative session.

Director Palmer asked Ms. Henderson how she anticipates the legislature will respond to the Higher Education Coordinating Board’s proposal and how much support they will give to it. Ms. Henderson said that is difficult to predict because the November election will bring a new governor and may also change the makeup of the legislature. She said she is concerned and believes the matter needs serious consideration and that is why she wanted to speak to the Board about it. She reiterated earlier statements that care must be taken in the OCCA response to the proposal to state Oregon’s community college position and to assure that they maintain a seat at the planning table to represent all 17 community colleges in the decision making around local governance.

Director Williams asked how this additional bureaucracy would impact OCCA’s representation of PCC. Ms. Henderson replied that OCCA is a Council of Governments of Oregon’s 17 community colleges and that those community colleges belong to OCCA. She added that OCCA will remain the advocate for those colleges, not any other coordinating board or other interest. Director Williams asked how having someone else determining budgets and distribution of funds would affect OCCA representation. Ms. Henderson replied that currently funding distribution between Community colleges, CCWD and the State Board of Higher Education is somewhat collegial but if this change were to be adopted OCCA would have to adopt more of an advocacy role for community colleges. Additionally, she said they would have to lobby the new board.

Director Palm asked if this is the third governance process community colleges have gone through has consideration been given to introduction of legislation that preserves local governance. Ms. Henderson replied there is currently little statutory authority on the powers of local community college boards but that consideration could be given to introducing some.

Director Frisbee said it was her understanding this proposal was driven by issues dealing with OUS and asked if there were counter proposals being considered that address those issues rather than revamp local governance for community colleges. Ms. Henderson said there are currently several proposals including one that deals with OUS and creates a new structure for them that separates them from their current state agency status. Another proposal from the governor’s Reset Committee is to move to performance based funding. Gubernatorial candidate John Kitzhauber proposes to create a K-20 board where all Oregon education would fall under a consolidated budget for education. She believes the proposal she presented to the Board is the one that is the most developed and has the most need to be acted on.

Investment Standards and Procedures Update

Cherie Chevalier, Associate Vice President Finance and Dee Wilson, Treasury Manager

Dr. Pulliams introduced Ms. Chevalier and Ms. Wilson and asked them to provide information to the Board regarding investment standards and procedures that have been approved by the State Short Term Board and are before them for approval as Resolution 10-020.

Ms. Chevalier said Ms. Wilson’s presentation would include changes to the college’s investment standards.

Ms. Wilson reported that only a few adjustments were needed for the investment standards and procedures due to PCC’s sound financial policies. Those few changes were due primarily to funding from the 2008 Bond Program and the collapse of the global credit market. She said steps taken in the process were: 1.) Studies were done to assure statutory references were up to date and titles were correct. 2.) Review to assure accounting standards were being met. 3.) A draft of the revisions was sent to the Oregon Short-Term Funding Board staff for a preliminary review. 4.) Their suggestions were incorporated into a second review. 5.) A letter was sent to Chair Williams to inform the Board that the investment guidelines were being reviewed in preparation for submission to the Board for approval. 6.) The revised investment standards and policy were then sent to the Oregon Short-term Fund Board for comments and recommendations for revisions. 7.) Their recommendations were incorporated and the document was sent to the Oregon Short-term Fund Board for final approval. Ms. Wilson added that the final step is Board Adoption of Resolution 11-020.

Goal 2 – Student Success

Laura Massey, Director, Institutional Effectiveness and Dr. Christine Chairsell, Vice President of Academic and Student Affairs

Ms. Massey noted the Student Success report is the final goal report for the 2009-2010 academic year and reported the College saw record breaking enrollment as well as many improvements and accomplishments. She reported there was tremendous growth in Lower Division Transfer classes as well as other areas with the only area of decline being Community Education classes. She added unemployment levels played a significant role in enrollment and that high enrollment created the opportunity to offer additional classes. Ms. Massey also reported that the year saw increased student retention and that one challenge for the future will be to maintain the increased enrollment trend when students are back at work full-time. She reported that instruction delivery changes in some areas such as English for Second Language Speakers (ESL) have helped students who in the past had difficulty transitioning from non-credit to credit ESL classes. Ms. Massey also noted that degrees and certificates awarded increased by 30% over last year partly as a result of the change in board policy that eliminated student fees for admission, graduation eligibility assessment, and others. Ms. Massey said another measure of student success is the high pass rates for certification and licensure of PCC students. She concluded the report saying PCC prepares students transferring to four-year institutions well and that their academic performance is as good as and in some instances excels students who begin at those institutions.

Chair Squire and Director Frisbee complimented the report and the college’s work to assure continued student success.

Dr. Pulliams noted that there is a national movement to change the community college funding formula from fte to outcomes based making the new policy changes even more important to the College. Dr. Chairsell noted that another trend is that holders of bachelor degrees are returning to community colleges to earn additional certificates in their fields.

Goal Revision Feedback from the Board Retreat
Dr. Christine Chairsell, Vice President of Academic and Student Affairs
Dr. Chairsell reviewed value and goal revisions requested at the August retreat by the Board in the areas of accountability, leadership, innovation, continuous improvement, efficiency, and sustainability. She described the process and reasoning for the changes and the importance the Board places on business partnerships and making students marketable for jobs in the future. She said that student success was addressed in the revisions as was degree completion, university transfer, and economic development. She concluded her report saying that measures for goals would be included in the October Board meeting.
