The Annual Cesar Chavez Distinguished Service Award recognizes members of the PCC Rock Creek community who exemplify the ideals of the late farm worker and labor leader César Chávez, co-founder of the National Farm Workers Association, which later became the United Farm Workers. A Mexican American, Chávez became the country’s most recognized Latino civil rights activist. His nonviolent approach to unionism made the farm workers' struggle a moral cause with nationwide support.

The Cesar Chavez Service Award recognizes individuals who distinguish themselves through leadership, service, and education. The awards are given to two PCC students (current or former) and one PCC faculty, staff, or community member. The nomination process is open to all members of the campus community.

Nominations must include a one-page or less description of how the nominee:

- Demonstrates support for civil rights in words and actions;
- Advocates for social and economic justice;
- Demonstrates commitment to service;
- Demonstrates leadership by motivating others to understand the need for human rights and social justice.

Nominations must be received no later than April 4th, 2014.
