

getting out of hand.

I think my boss ignores me because I have a disability.

I think she treats me like that because I'm overweight.

My teacher hates my service dog. I think my grade is affected.

The security guard. He follows me every day.

I legally changed my name to Willow 2 months ago but he still calls me Will. Every day.

If he calls me honey, or sweetie one more time I'm afraid I'm going to lose it. And then my job.

She asked me how to cook enchiladas. I don't know how.

They were making jokes about my race loud enough for me to hear. On purpose.

They asked me if I was a legal citizen. Can they do that?

I'm afraid to say anything because that's his boss. I really need this job. I have 2 kids and a mortgage.

My boss doesn't listen to me because I'm the only woman on the staff.

They wrapped their t-shirts on their heads like a hijab.

I'm starting to fear for my family's safety.

I think my age was a factor. They think I'm too old.

She asked me where "my people" were from.

How do I say something without getting fired?

I'm not his BRO. I'm certainly not his HOMIE.

My neighbor makes racist jokes when he knows I can hear.

He's giving me the creeps.

It just feels hopeless. It will never change. We're

LISTENING INTERVENTION
TEAM FOR EQUITY

Experiencing inequity? You may benefit from talking to a LITE Listener.

LITE Listeners are PCC faculty and staff members who have been trained to offer support, resources, and validation to people experiencing difficult intercultural interactions on campus.

LITE is a resource for students, faculty, and staff who would like to have a conversation about their experiences on campus in the following areas:

- culture
- ability
- age
- faith
- ethnicity and race
- sexual orientation
- national origin
- gender identity & expression
- veteran/service member status
- other aspects of personal identity

Go online to learn more about LITE or to sign up to talk to a LITE listener today.

www.pcc.edu/lite